

Leopoldo Destro: associational architectures, enterprises and the strategic location of the territory

From January 2023, entrepreneurs from Treviso, Padua, Venice and Rovigo kick off Confindustria Veneto Est, an association that counts on 5,200 companies and over 280,000 employees and thus goes to be the second territorial association of Confindustria. It places itself in that industrial triangle that sees Milan, Bologna and Veneto Est.

An association that will work together with the entire territory for the growth of the territory and the growth of its companies, taking advantage of important assets that are already well outlined, but that will need to be strengthened. How? Clearly with the high-speed rail links directed to Milan and Bologna. Air links are already provided but they will have to be strengthened to increase the internationalization of this area. Therefore, the Treviso and Venice airport hubs are crucial. Good is also the port of Venice, which will need a strong, cohesive and concrete synergy with the interports of Padua and Rovigo. There is also the possibility of connecting this one, that is metropolitan city for all intents and purposes and goes beyond administrative boundaries, with a surface metro. Looking beyond, these hubs could be possibly linked even by innovative means, thinking about electric means of transport but also the world of fast connect and the

What we are outlining is an association that will help the member companies in all the tables of representation, both local, national and European. It is a cohesive and strong entity that will support companies in the different transactions that they will face in the coming months and years, and I'm referring to the ecological, digital, cultural and also financial transition. A cohesive and strong subject that will follow the growth of companies as well, both to make sure that the generational transition can succeed and that the growth can be placed within virtuous and noble supply chains to support companies.

All this has to be done with a view to the growth of the common good, which is our territory and are our companies, and Confindustria Veneto Est will do it with the contribution of all the stakeholders in the area.
